Excerpt: . . . than the ordinary rock making minerals which form the chief constituents in the rocks of the series examined. The marbles and the limestones of the earth's crust are confined to its most superficial portion, resulting as they do from the process of sedimentation. There is every reason to believe, however, that what we may term the substructure of the earth's crust is composed of acid and basic plutonic igneous rocks. These make up the lowest part of the crust to which we have access and are found coming up from the still greater depths. The cubic compressibility  $D$  of the earth's crust must lie between the values given above for the granites and the basic intrusives, approaching one or other of these values according to the relative proportion in it of one or other of these classes of rocks. If we take the average of the values obtained from these two classes of rocks as represented by the seven granites and the five basic intrusives (including the nepheline syenite) the values obtained for  $D$  of 6, 353, 500. This, as will be seen, differs but little from the value of  $D$  obtained for plate glass which is 6, 448, 000. If, therefore, the earth's crust be composed of granite and basic igneous rocks in approximately equal proportions, its compressibility will be that of glass. If it be composed almost exclusively of granite, the earth's crust will be more quoted in Becker: Experiments...
