His critical and disparaging opinion of dialogue in film shows clearly that he did not consider language to be a privileged cinematic medium for communication - quite the opposite and he remarks that language 'should simply be a sound among other sounds, just something that comes out of the mouths of people whose eyes tell the story in visual terms' (Hitchcock in Truffaut 272). The possibilities of the camera for conveying meaning was paramount to Hitchcock's storytelling. As a filmmaker, he is widely acknowledged for his use of point-of-view shots, tracking shots, and other techniques that reinforce the power of looking or the role of the gaze in cinema. A wellknown example of his use of...
